Eighth Amendment Rights determined NOT to be violated

Charleston Office obtained a summary judgment on behalf of a prison healthcare provider. Managing Member Charles R. Bailey and Member Jordan K. Herrick defended a client in a case involving a prisoner who claimed she did not receive adequate treatment following an injury to her wrist and knee.

The prisoner alleged that the healthcare provider violated her Eighth Amendment rights in failing to timely or properly provide her treatment.

The District Court found that the healthcare provider did not act in a deliberately indifferent manner to the prisoner's alleged injuries and therefore found in favor of the healthcare provider.
