Cray • Huber

On May 17, 2017, Stephen W. Heil and Anthony M. Sam obtained summary judgment in a multi-million brain injury case in Cook County, Illinois. The case involved a night club patron who allegedly suffered a traumatic brain injury after a New Year's Eve party when he was struck by an outward opening door at the night club. The plaintiff sued the night club, its owners/managers and the head of security for negligence in failing to monitor the exit door or post signs regarding the defective door. In granting summary judgment, the judge found that the defendants did not owe a duty to plaintiff under Illinois law.
